

Aandi ayaayin?

How to Play:

- Create groups with three or more members and assign them a specific word or phrase.
- The assigned word or phrase will be the group's cattle call. They will call out those words or phrases as soon as the game starts.
- The students will be blindfolded and mixed with other groups. The goal is to find all their members as quickly as possible.
- When the instructor calls out "Odaminodaa!", everyone tries to locate their group by calling out to them using their cattle call. The target words or phrases could be anything. For example, Boozhoo (Hello) Aaniin ezhi-ayaayin? (How are you feeling?). You can also use colors, days of the week, numbers, etc.

How to Win:

Instruct the class to say, "Ningjiizhiitaamin!" if they think they have rounded up every last member of their team. The first one to do this wins!

You can have several rounds of the game and assign different words for the groups each time. That will give the players more time to practice more words.
